COPYWRITING AND YOUR BRAND

- What is your company's mission?
- How do you want people to feel about your brand?
- If you could picture your brand as a person, how would they act and sound?

NO ACCIDENTAL COPY

- Who is your audience?
- What's the purpose of this piece of content or copy?
- Does it make sense with other elements on the site?

2. DESIGN WITH

EMPATHY

IN THEIR SHOES

- What is the reader trying to do?
- What could the reader be feeling?
- How did the reader get here?
- What's happening next?
- What choices can they make?

IN THEIR SHOES

- What is happening in this frame?
- How does it relate to the frames before and after it?
- Is it complete? What's missing from the story?
- Does everything sound like it came from the same place?

FEELINGS

- Fear of irreversible changes
- Fear of data loss
- Fears over personal data security
- Fear of getting spammed

USE COPY TO:

- Help users get started
- Let users know what to do next
- Explain new features
- Reduce cognitive effort
- Suggest users take a certain action
- Help users in a moment of failure

COPYEDITING YOUR SCREENS

- Check for typos
- Edit for consistency
- Review the order
- Narrow the focus
- Question the timing

WHAT'S THE RIGHT AMOUNT OF INSTRUCTION?

The sweet spot sets clear expectations while staying out of the way.

ACCESSIBILITY

- Use Label elements
- Use precise language
- All microcopy should appear as live text—not as an image
- Make sure tooltip text is accessible

3. KEEP IT

SIMPLE

CLEAR > CUTE

- Use clear, active, and precise language
- Avoid jargon and idioms
- Replace ambiguous language
- Focus on one idea/task at a time

Network Problem

This is what happens when too many people watch cat videos at the same time.

Try again in a bit.
